Market Comments

A protracted U.S. government shutdown could mean that the release of key official data on employment and inflation is delayed or disrupted, clouding the picture on the health of the world's biggest economy and the path for interest rates. Markets have priced in a 100% probability of an October cut and an 88% chance of another in December. August PCE index showed core inflation at 2.9%. In the absence of official data, yesterday's ADP reading took on additional significance. This showed private-sector employment fell by 32k in September—well below expectations—reinforcing concerns that the labor market is cooling. We expect the QAR profit rates to fall further in line with the FED rate cuts and investors should expect the profit rates to go lower in line with that.
