Market Comments

The USD target federal funds interest rate is projected to follow a "higher-for-longer" restrictive path, currently sitting at a target range of 3.75% to 4.00% after a 25-basis-point increase in mid-September 2026. While a sharply weaker September employment report showing just 29,000 payrolls added has collapsed market-implied rate hike odds for October down to 17%–28% (prompting a tactical pause by the Fed). Major Wall Street firms and the Fed's own dot-plot projections strongly position for one final 25-bps rate hike in December 2026, which will lift the terminal target range to 4.00%–4.25%. Backed by sticky PCE inflation projections of 3.7% and resilient full-year GDP growth revisions up to 2.3%, the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) signals an extended plateau, projecting a median interest rate of 4.1% through year-end 2027. The QAR profit rates is expected to be steady and move gradually in line with the FED rates.
